

Housing For A Bicycle Shifter

Abstract of Disclosure

A housing for an actuation device for a bicycle gearing system includes at least one housing element and an installation opening. A closure member covers the installation opening. The closure member is integral with the housing element. The combined housing and closure member is particularly advantageous in terms of installation, maintenance, and reliability. It moreover opens up possibilities for cost savings in tool design and production.